BYRON Trails has started a crowdfunding campaign on Pozible to finish the production of its compilation of walks in the area.

Author Mairead Cleary has set out to raise $17,500 on Pozible to finish development and produce the first batch of printed books.

Ms Cleary, a local resident, said her founding of Byron Trails came about through her desire to give people an experience of nature.

"It is my belief that if people experience a connection with nature they will want to repeat it again and again," she said.

"And if that gets people outdoors more often then the project has been a success."

Byron Trails will contain information about the area, as well as tips for staying safe in the bush and will be a complete resource for all levels, from the novice to the avid hiker.

Ms Cleary expects the 150-page book to be in print in autumn 2016 and Pozible contributors will receive invitations to the exclusive launch party.

"Walking is emerging as the most popular of all outdoor activities and these walks will attract people out of the main tourist hubs into the surrounding rural hamlets," she said.
